

I recently became aware of the Natl Assoc of Broadcasters efforts to limit satellite radio; specifically to prevent them from providing traffic and weather information. As a current customer of satellite radio, I feel that there is a place for all types of radio today. In our house, we use the commercial radio stations while getting ready in the morning. The traffic and weather reports are not really very helpful. The weather is too brief and the traffic report is not timely. We don't truly rely on either. We use the internet weather sites to plan our day. I can't imagine that XM will be able to sell too many additional subscriptions based on this feature. Which brings me to the next point; I pay for satellite. I think of it as the premium channels of radio. I listen when I want variety not available on the commercial stations. The NAB should realize that they have run me off with their playlist formats, annoying games and DJs. Satellite radio offers formats that I can't find anywhere else. Thanks.
